Kwantum Nederland BV v Vitra Collections AG, Case C-227/23

European Court of Justice

von Danwit VP, Arabadjiev, & Ziemele JJ

At issue were artistic design copyrights to chairs designed by Charles and Ray Eames of the United States in 1950. The current holder of the copyright is Vitra Collections of Switzerland who objected to unauthorised versions of the chairs being sold in Dutch stores. International copyright protection is primarily protected by the Berne Convention. The dispute arose from a clause in the Berne Convention that limits protection for works of applied art, like furniture. Under the Convention, copyright protection is extended to designs and models only in countries that have agreed to so extend the protection. The Supreme Court of the Netherlands requested the European Court to decide whether members of the EU, like the Netherlands, were permitted to exclude copyright protection to applied art from non-EU countries. The Court of Justice found that copyright in a work of applied art is one of the rights recognised by the EU and that member nations were not permitted to exclude copyright protections to applied art from non-EU states. Further, as a matter of EU law, individual countries within the EU could not apply their own legal criteria how to treat copyright in applied art that originated beyond the EU. The result is that all EU states must respect copyright in applied art regardless of the language in the Berne Convention.

Case of Kobaliya v Russia, No 39446/16

European Court of Human Rights

Pastor Vilanova P, Schukking, Serghides, Roosma, Ktistakis, Mjöll Arnardóttir, & Kovatcheva JJ

Prior to its exclusion from the Council of Europe in 2022, Russia was bound by the European Convention on Human Rights and subject to the jurisdiction of the European Court of Human Rights. Here the activity in question occurred between 2012 and 2022 and related to fundamental rights to freedom of expression and assembly as guaranteed by the Convention. Under Russian law, non-governmental organisations (NGOs), media organisations, and individuals who received any foreign support were required to register as 'foreign agents' and conform to restrictions placed on persons so designated. The complainants alleged that the statutory definition was so overly broad as to impinge on rights to freedom of expression and freedom of assembly guaranteed by Articles 10 and 11 of the European Convention. The European Court found that the Russian legislation was unlawful because it was overly broad and employed the stigmatising term 'foreign agent' to a very wide universe of parties that could not all be lumped together as 'foreign agents'. Under Russian law, once designated as a foreign agent, substantial regulatory legislation attached curtailing the political rights of the parties so classified. By casting such a wide net, the term 'foreign agent' was used to circumvent basic European Convention rights.

Poem for Friday

Echo

By Christina Rossetti (1830-1894)

Come to me in the silence of the night;
Come in the speaking silence of a dream;
Come with soft rounded cheeks and eyes as bright
As sunlight on a stream;
Come back in tears,
O memory, hope, love of finished years.

Oh dream how sweet, too sweet, too bitter sweet,
Whose wakening should have been in Paradise,
Where souls brimfull of love abide and meet;
Where thirsting longing eyes
Watch the slow door
That opening, letting in, lets out no more.

Yet come to me in dreams, that I may live
My very life again tho' cold in death:
Come back to me in dreams, that I may give
Pulse for pulse, breath for breath:
Speak low, lean low,
As long ago, my love, how long ago.

Christina Georgina Rossetti, born on 5 December, 1830, was one of the foremost poets of her era. Her father, Gabrielle, was an Italian Poet, and later chair of Italian at King's College, in London. Her mother Frances Polidor, an Anglo-Italian, home schooled her children in a climate of intellectual excellence. From 1845 Christina, by then a prolific poet, suffered an illness, that some consider was at least influenced by mental illness. She continued to have bouts of serious illness throughout her life. Rossetti's poetry, included the collections Goblin Market and other Poems (1862), The Prince's Progress (1866), A Pageant (1881), and The Face of the Deep (1882). Christina Rossetti died on 29 December, 1894.
